Home Why Adopt? Our Mission Friends Adopt Contact

Our Mission

Polly's Home For Imaginary Friends was established in 2014 on the belief that all friends deserve companionship, even imaginary friends. When a child grows up and out of their imaginary friend, it normally means that a human has taken it's place. A child gets to continue a life of companionship, why can't an imaginary friend? There was a need for a shelter where these abandoned friends can go and have another chance at companionship.

Polly provides a warm, safe environment for imaginary friends while they anticipate their next human companion. If it were not for Polly's and other shelters like it, imaginary friends would slowly fade away and be no more. It is a waste of a perfectly good body!

And it isn't just imaginary friends who are looking for companionship. Human children are also in need of a friend and, often, a good role model. Unfortunately, some children are unable, or too irresponsible to think up a good role model for a friend. Sometimes this can lead to disastrous consequences. We provide the perfect opportunity for friendship.

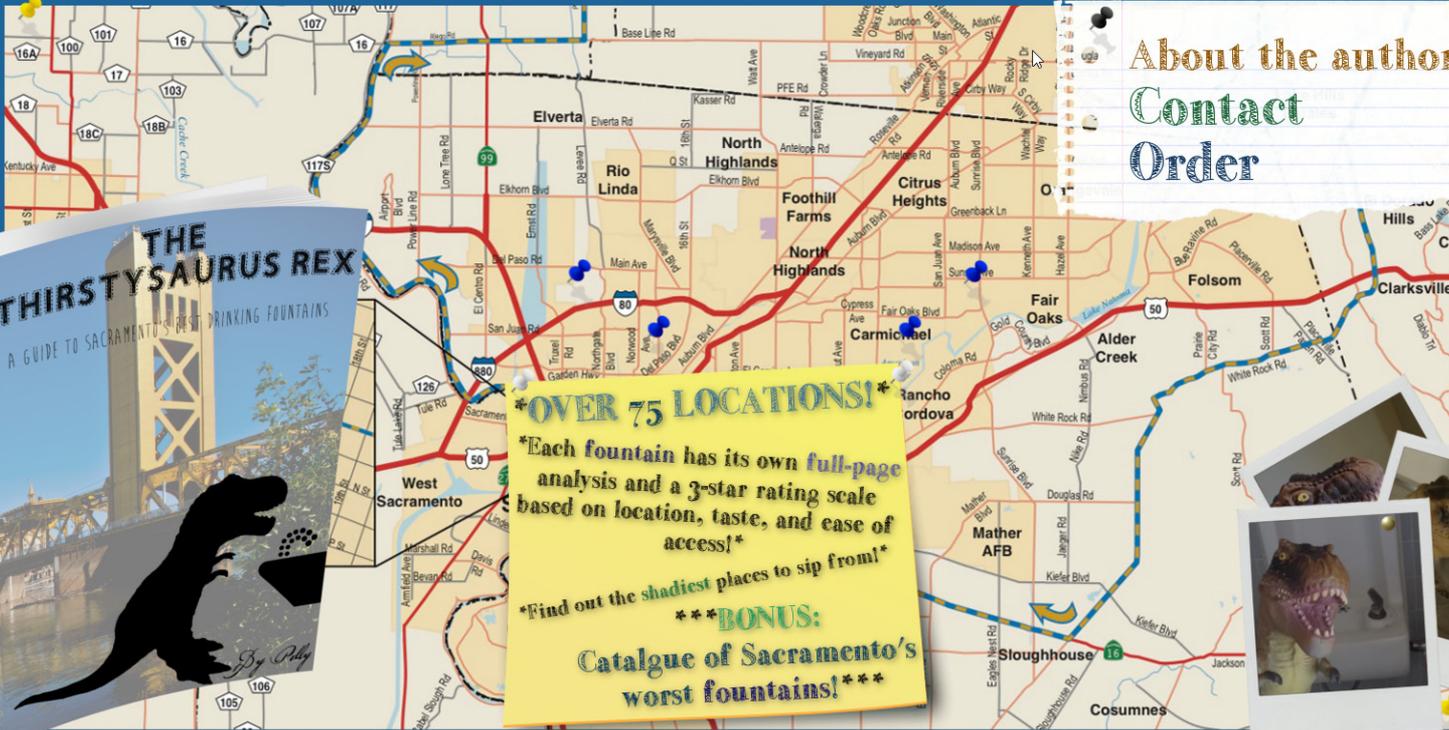

Everyone here at Polly's are eagerly awaiting a new human to befriend. Parents and their children are welcome to come by during the daytime and get to know some of our candidates. We have a wide variety of personalities, genders, and physical capabilities and talents. We don't discriminate here and so no one is turned away. Plans are currently underway to provide courses to imaginary friends that will teach them other languages, including sign language, so that every kids can have the opportunity to a friend.

Our Web Site was created in order to reach out even further. Photographs of imaginary friends are not yet possible, but we try to provide drawings/sketches that have been done by their previous human "friends", as well as small descriptions to get a little bit of a better understanding of a particular friend's strong points and possible past history. It must be noted, however, that imaginary friends have the ability to adopt easily and quickly. Don't assume that, based on their descriptions, that they will not be compatible with your child. This is often an easy assumption that can be made.

We also ask that you consider adopting a Santa. After every Christmas, we get a large number of abandoned or forgotten Santa Claus. Santas are looking for forever homes as well and they make great friends 365 days out of the year. We get skinny Santas, fat Santas, Male Santas, Female Santas, and santas of all sorts of races and ethnic backgrounds. Imaginary Santas are often far less judgemental than the real Santa and will love your child no matter what. Naughty or nice.

*Accuracy of imaginary friends is dependent on their previous human friend's drawing ability. We have kept the originals because we feel that it captures the friend's true essence.

THE THIRSTYSAURUS REX

About

Hey there! My name is Polly and I am a sweet and sassy Tyrannosaurus rex.

I love to Snapchat my friends and tend to my garden. When it is really nice outside, I love to relax with a cold Shirley Temple. I am also a self-proclaimed "drinking fountain enthusiast" and I am always cruising around Sacramento, looking for the best drinking fountain hotspots.

I feel that with my growing knowledge of the best places to get a sip of water in the Sacramento area, I can put together a fantastic blog and let others know where they should be going to wet their whistles. I have just the right enthusiasm and can-do attitude that one needs in order to regularly keep such a blog up-to-date.
