Chapter 6A: Memory, Part 1
Psychology, 6e

Across
1. If you remember the first day of your psychology class, it would be this kind of memory.
5. People who do this frequently tend to have more déjà vu experiences.
7. Psychologist and nationally recognized expert on memory distortions.
10. When encoding __ occurs, you can't remember the name of someone you just met.
13. In Ebbinghaus forgetting curve, information that is not forgotten becomes this over time.
14. People tend to be very confident in the accuracy of these memories.
16. The right one can help trigger the recall of information stored in long-term memory.
19. This type of memory is also called nondeclarative.
21. Fundamental memory process.
23. Encoding specificity phenomenon in which a given mood tends to evoke memories consistent with that mood.
24. Can contribute to déjà vu when this kind of memory is forgotten.

Down
2. According to Baddeley, this memory component is specialized to handle verbal material.
Down

3. This effect is the tendency to recall first items in list.
4. Common retrieval failure experience in which you often remember related bits of information.
6. Used himself and nonsense syllables to study forgetting.
8. Once thought to be short-term memory’s magical number.
9. According to Baddeley, this executive manages the activities of the phonological loop and visuospatial sketchpad.
11. Fill-in-the-blank tests are an example of this kind of recall.
12. In short-term memory, information that is not rehearsed does this.
13. His classic study demonstrated the duration of sensory memory.
15. Déjà vu expert.
17. This effect is tendency to recall last items in list.
18. Interference that occurs when a new memory hinders your ability to remember an old memory.
20. Information in short-term memory will be lost in about 20 seconds if you don't do this with it.
22. Another name for auditory sensory memory.